Microchipping is a completely safe, effective way of identifying your dog or cat should he/she become lost. This tiny chip can be detected by a veterinary office or animal service agency and allow them to contact you. We can easily implant the chip today while under anesthesia.

At Eighth Street Veterinary Care, we strongly recommend that all pets undergoing general anesthesia have pre-anesthetic blood testing completed before the procedure. This blood work is performed as a way of detecting problems that may pose an increased risk during anesthesia. By performing these blood tests, the risk of anesthetic complication is reduced. Cost: $49.50

I hereby authorize Eighth Street Veterinary Care and its doctors and agents to perform the above listed procedures including sedation and/or general anesthesia as required to complete these procedures, as deemed necessary by the attending doctor. I understand that while every effort is made toward anesthetic safety, there is no guarantee made or implied regarding anesthetic safety or successful result of the treatment proposed. I agree to any additional diagnostic, medical, or surgical measures deemed necessary for medical or surgical emergencies or otherwise unforeseen circumstances.
